

Dylan Mariano, D.P.M., Class of 2024

My name is Dylan Mariano, I am from Tuxedo Park, New York and I matched for my podiatric surgical residency at Englewood Hospital Medical Center in Englewood New Jersey. I completed my undergraduate degree in Health Science Studies with a double minor in business and psychology at Quinnipiac University in Hamden, Connecticut. I went on to also complete my MBA with a focus in health care management at the Quinnipiac University School of Business as well.

I realized shortly after that I was missing the clinical aspect of my passion for health care and became interested in podiatry after shadowing several physician specialties and seeing a great potential for work-life balance and career growth in the specialty of foot and ankle surgery. I plan to spend my 3 years of Residency honing my skills as a limb salvage and trauma surgeon, as well as mastering the art of wound care for the lower extremity. I hope to have my own wound care and limb salvage practice one day to help as many people as I can to stay active and happy on their own two feet. My hobbies outside of podiatry include wood working, hiking with my dogs, spending time with my significant other and non-profit work supporting my favorite organizations.
