

NYCPM
NEW YORK COLLEGE OF PODIATRIC MEDICINE

Sahil Mapkar

Doctor of Podiatric Medicine Candidate

New York College of Podiatric Medicine

Class of 2025

Sahil Mapkar is a second-year student at the New York College of Podiatric Medicine (NYCPM). Sahil graduated Magna Cum Laude from Rutgers University with a Bachelor of Science Degree in Exercise Science. He currently serves as Treasurer of the Public Health Club and Secretary to the Asian American Association, and is a Student Ambassador at NYCPM.

Outside of NYCPM, Sahil is a liaison for the Student Engagement Committee for the American Podiatric Medical Association, volunteers at the Urban Outreach Center, and is a lab member at the NYU Langone Health Musculoskeletal Research Center in the Department of Orthopedic Surgery. His interest in podiatry began after shadowing a physical therapist who had a strong affiliation with a podiatric clinic, where he then began shadowing a podiatrist, cementing his interest in the field. In the future, Sahil aims to be involved in limb salvage for diabetic populations, as well as educating future medical professionals.